

What Is White Carrara Marble?

White Carrara is a marble that originates from Carrara, Italy, it is an Italian marble that signifies and liberates the space it's placed in with consistency in both color and elegance. Unmatched by the finest marble across the world, White Carrara is a countertop option that utilizes the most potential in tying a room together.

Table of Contents

Quality Of White Carrara Marble

Cost Of White Carrara Marble

Most Suitable Areas For White Carrara Marble

How To Properly Seal Marble

Value Of White Carrara Marble

Quality Of White Carrara Marble

The patterns in this white stone are striated with dark gray veins. Leaning towards the realm of blue-gray shading, the White Carrara is known for its unique coloring and appearance. This natural stone captures both luxury and beauty. With the available option of installing either the polished, the matte, or the honed finishes, homeowners can maintain a sense of ease knowing that there are alternatives to the surfaces.

Cost Of White Carrara Marble

To purchase, fabricate, and install white carrara marble, you'll have to spend an estimate between $50 to $75 per square foot. Both the labor and material costs are applied to this cost range. By using our estimator tool, you can find out about the total cost to install your white carrara marble.

Most Suitable Areas For White Carrara Marble

One of the best locations to install this stone is the installation of kitchen countertops. A heavily veined material that varies from color to color, this type of marble will be great to combat stains, discoloration, and superficial blemishes. Since marble is one of the most durable and one of the toughest stones, you can be rest assured that complications involving your countertop are less likely to occur.

However, you should remember that marble needs to be sealed each year. Although there are certain benefits that come with this type of stone, you'll want to ensure the quality and condition of your marble. To prevent that your stone is secure against stains or misshapen etches, you should think about the proper sealing methods that go along with installing marble. Homeowners should remind themselves that marble is not acid-proof, which means sealers are pivotal to maintaining the appeal and appearance of the White Carrara.

How To Properly Seal Marble

Before the sealing process can begin, homeowners should determine whether they need to reseal their countertops by performing a Waterdrop test. Essentially, homeowners will use a drop of water and confirm whether it will penetrate the surface or not. If the water isn't in place of where it was dropped and looks as if it has been absorbed through the material, you're going to want to have the stone sealed.

After you conduct the test and it seems that you require a new sealing job, you should get rid of anything on your countertop and clean any debris that might be in the way. Make sure to clean the surface thoroughly with a damp cloth and wipe everything down to get rid of all the dust and particles.

Once you've finished cleaning and polishing your stone, you have to let the material dry. Then, you'll need to use the sealer of choice. The one we recommend most is Superior Zero Ultra Stone Protector. Use a copious amount of the sealer throughout the surface of your White Carrara and make sure that every area is entirely covered. Keep an open eye and examine every part of your countertop to ensure there is no residue left behind. As you inspect the details, you'll want to prevent the hazy residue caused by the sealer. Finish the process by allowing the sealer to dry and allow the sealer to soak into every crevice and pore in the marble.

Value Of White Carrara Marble

When it comes to selling your home, marble won't add any resale value unless the quality of the stone is reputable. Depending on how the stone was installed and what the overall project looks like, you could be looking at the possibility of a higher return on investment. Since White Carrara is a renowned Italian marble, homeowners could expect a higher offer than expected once they decide to sell their homes to homebuyers.