What Are Your Black Countertop Options?

When narrowing down your options for black countertops, you will find that you have three primary stone options to choose from: granite, marble and quartz. Each of these three types of stone come with their advantages and disadvantages, shown below.

Granite Countertops

Advantages:

- Natural stone look
- Many types to choose from
- Durable
- Heat resistant
- High resale value

Disadvantages:

- Rare granite will cost more
- Heavy objects can cause damages if dropped on the surface
- Needs to be re-sealed once every year

Marble Countertops

Advantages:

- Elegant and timeless look
- Smooth feel
- Easy to fix small damages
- High resale value

- Can be used in many places throughout the house, such as bathrooms and kitchens
- Many different types to choose from

Disadvantages:

- Higher cost than granite
- Porous
- Prone to scratching
- Needs to be re-sealed about every three months

Quartz Countertops

Advantages:

- Man-made, making customization relatively easy
- Can be engineered to look like natural stone
- Durable
- Does not require sealing
- Environmentally friendly

Disadvantages:

- High cost
- Not heat resistant
- Seams are easily visible

- Does not hold the ‘classic’ appeal of granite or marble

How Much Do Granite Countertops Cost?

The cost of black granite countertops depends on a variety of factors. The cost will depend largely on what specific type of black granite you use, as well as how much of the material you need. Additional cost factors include any customization elements, such as edging. Various types of black granite typically cost anywhere between $25 to $70 per square foot installed. If you're looking to get a better idea of the cost of any stone material, Marble.com has an Estimator Tool that you can use.

How Much Do Marble Countertops Cost?

Marble typically costs a little more than granite. It usually costs somewhere between $50 to $150 per square foot installed, depending largely on the same factors that the price of granite does. Despite its status as an elegant natural stone material, marble can be relatively affordable if you are not looking to spend a fortune.

How Much Do Quartz Countertops Cost?

Do not be fooled if you believe that just because quartz is engineered stone that it is any cheaper than granite or marble. In fact, it's quite the opposite. In many cases, quartz can be more expensive than many types of granite and marble. Depending on factors such as size and customization, quartz countertops can cost you somewhere in the range of $70 to $175 per square foot installed.

Where Should I Have Black Countertops?

You can have black countertops anywhere in the house, but it may be in your best interest to install them somewhere where they will receive a lot of attention, like in the kitchen. Black kitchen countertops will instantly become the focal point of your home. We spend so much of our time at home in the kitchen, so why not install countertops that look impressive? Depending on the material you use, black kitchen countertops can have amazing impacts – both visually and functionally. One benefit that granite, marble and quartz will all offer is impressive looks. Consider both the looks and additional factors before you purchase your black countertops.

Backsplash Ideas for Black Countertops

A great addition to your new black countertop is a stylish backsplash. A backsplash will perfectly complement the countertop. Consider whether you are going for a contrasting look or if you want a look that is more uniform. If you desire a contrasting look, try a lighter colored material for the backsplash, such as a white subway tile backsplash. If you are looking for the uniform appearance, you can use the same type of stone that you use on the countertop for the backsplash. This will create a pleasing harmony between the countertop and the backsplash. If you want to use the same black stone for your countertop and backsplash but do not want the space to appear too dark, make sure that you have adequate lighting in the area.

Finishes for Black Countertops

When choosing a finish for your new countertop, you have the option of a honed or polished look. A honed finish will give your new countertop a matte look, while a polished finish will make your countertop shine. Which finish looks better is completely a matter of personal preference. As for maintenance, a countertop with a honed finish will require more frequent sealing, so be sure to make note of that before deciding.

Something else to keep in mind is that a honed finish is more expensive than a polished finish.

Adding new countertops in your home is a huge choice and is most likely a choice you will only make once. Because of this, you will want to make sure you get a countertop that will please you for years to come. If you have narrowed your search down to black countertops, you will have no shortage of options to choose from in terms of both materials and styles. Now that you have background knowledge on many of your options, you can take the next step of selecting which one is right for your home.
