

Granite that Looks Like Wood: A Guide

Table of Contents

What Types of Granite Look Like Wood?

Why Choose Granite Countertops Over Wood Countertops?

Wood cabinets are a common presence in many kitchens. In addition, many homeowners enjoy the appearance of wood countertops (and similar options like butcher block countertops). While solid surface and lamine countertops can mimic the look of wood and many other materials, it is also in your best interest to find a material that is high quality.

Granite countertops are extremely popular in today's homes. The natural stone is beautiful, durable and easy to care for, among numerous other benefits. From kitchen countertops to kitchen island tops, backsplashes and more, granite is one of the best materials you can choose.

So what if you want a wood grain look but the benefits of granite? If this is the case, you are in luck. There are several gorgeous granite slabs that resemble wood. This guide will highlight the best types of granite that resemble wood.

What Types of Granite Look Like Wood?

When it comes to countertop materials, you will want something that is going to stay in great shape for many years. While wood countertops are beloved for their 'warm' appearance, the surfaces are not as tough as granite. Granted, you will want to take great care of your granite, but the natural stone countertops can handle much more wear and tear than wood can. Below are four amazing types of granite that look like wood.

Sequoia Brown Granite

The black veining that accompanies the brown and gray tones of this Brazilian granite make it a perfect alternative to wood. This stunning natural stone can easily become the focal point of whatever room you install it in.

Tempest Granite

Dark browns, golds, yellows and burgundy combine in this aesthetically pleasing granite. Tempest granite is a wonderful choice if you are looking for a granite countertop option that resembles wood.

White Thunder Granite

Gray, white, black and brown tones come together in this magnificent granite slab. Whether you are trying to match your wood kitchen cabinets or just like the look of the stone in general, it is a great choice for granite that looks like wood.

Peregrine C Granite

Peregrine C granite features a light cream background with ivory and brown veins. If you are looking for a granite countertop material that mimics the look of wood, it is truly one of your best options.

Granite that Looks Like Wood: Best Options

Sequoia Brown granite
Tempest granite
White Thunder granite
Peregrine C granite

Why Choose Granite Countertops Over Wood Countertops?

While wood countertops may look nice, the surfaces are prone to scratches and dents – two issues that you will not receive with granite countertops. Granite is a tough and durable natural stone that is stain resistant, heat resistant and scratch resistant. It is an incredibly versatile material that can put the finishing touches on your kitchen design, bathroom design or project in another area of the house. It is no surprise that so many homeowners opt to complete their remodels using this natural stone.

There is no need to feel disappointed if you like the look of wood countertops but want a material that is stronger. The types of granite detailed above will help you get the best of both worlds with your new countertop, backsplash or other home surface.